ARCTIC STORM

Watch Eyes Trilogy • Book One
 by Joanne Sundell

For Fans Of:
 Suzanne Collins, Stephenie Meyer and Jack London

Call of the Wild meets Brother Bear in this epic tale of adventure, endurance, and young love — a heroic journey tested against America's last frontier.

This story begins in 1908 when the gentle Chukchi sled dog is traded away from its native home in Siberia and set on a perilous course across the Bering Sea for the gold-rich territory of Alaska, landing them in a fight for survival they didn't start.

Thirteen-year-old Anya is a Chukchi shaman, a medium able to pass between the spirit world and the human world. She will do anything to protect her dogs. Forced onto a deadly journey to save them, a chance meeting with sixteen-year-old seafarer, Rune Johansson, puts him on the same path as her own. Both have to make a stand against enemies hiding in shadow, waiting to strike.

The ice storm is coming.

I've raised and loved Siberian huskies for over 40 years. My last husky, Xander, died recently at fourteen. His death prompted me to begin researching then writing the Watch Eyes Trilogy. Before attempting this YA frontier series, I wrote historical romance set primarily in the Old West. My six published novels to date are with Five Star, Gale/Cengage. The Watch Eyes Trilogy is set in the Arctic West.

I live between Colorado and California, my husband and I ever chasing down our children and grandchildren scattered therein. Raised in the Rockies, our brood is never far from the West they love. Though retired from nursing, the time I have to write is precious little. I've taken the coveted 4:00 a.m. slot. Sorry folks.

My best to you, readers all,

Joanne Sundell
