My First Siberian

by Randee McQueen

My first "husky" I thought was a Siberian/GSD mix but when I got my first "Siberian" and met many that knew the different breeds Jackpot was an Alaskan Malamute/GSD cross. I had rescued his mom and she was a purebred Alaskan Malamute by the pictures.

The night Jackpot died, at 15 years (1990), I started looking for another dog. I wanted another like him and since I thought he was half Siberian I looked for Siberian Breeders. I was lucky that I now know I talked with two "breeders" that were really puppy mills but bought one from a reputable breeder, Kaila Kennels. I went to pick out one of two puppies that she had. Both were males, one was black/white and the other a red/white. I decided on the red/white as Jackpot was black and white and perfect at 15 and I didn't want everyone to expect the same of my new puppy so I bought the Red and White puppy.

He was named Maxx, after the sheepdog in Little Mermaid. My niece and nephew named him and I wondered where it came from, and then saw it while the kids were watching the movie. Kaila's Maxx of Umunhum was a great dog, loved sledding and was a therapy dog for most of his life. He helped me with many of the foster dogs who have gone through my home. His picture appears in Michael Jennings book "Siberian Husky, Able Athlete, able friend" and was on the cover of 2 "Just Huskies" calendars (2000, 2001). He lived to be over 14 years old.
